A race, equity and inclusion planning process is built on a series of meetings. When you organize meetings that are engaging and focused, they will energize your team and keep them coming back. When you create meetings that allow people to bring their authentic selves and feel like their ideas are valued in ways that are honest, joyful and engaging, you’re modeling what equity actually looks like day to day. Changing the way your meetings operate can be a powerful way to support a more equity-minded organizational culture.

IN THIS TOOL WE OFFER:

Five Elements of Agenda Design
These elements will support your preparation to maximize the relevance and effectiveness of each meeting.

A Sample Agenda Template
This sample illustrates how the elements of agenda design are reflected in a single meeting.

Suggested Meeting Norms
In all meetings—particularly those focused on race, equity and inclusion—norms help to set a productive tone and create a container within which the group can work through challenging discussions.
DESIGNING EFFECTIVE MEETINGS—SET UP, SAMPLE AGENDA AND SUGGESTED MEETING NORMS

SETTING UP YOUR MEETINGS FOR SUCCESS

As you and your team prepare meeting agendas, consider these five areas.

1. PURPOSE
2. DESIRED OUTCOME STATEMENT
3. STAKEHOLDER ANALYSIS
4. INVOLVEMENT IN DECISION MAKING
5. MEETING ROLES

Setting Up Your Meetings for Success

Purpose
Why are we meeting?

Examples Include:
- Hear each other’s perspectives and build community
- Celebrate success
- Share information
- Generate options
- Develop recommendations
- Develop a plan
- Make decisions
- Track process as plans are implemented

Desired Outcome Statement
What are the specific outcomes this meeting aims to achieve?

Examples Include:
- Share understanding of XYZ so we can do ABC
- Prioritize list of options
- Agree on XYZ

Stakeholder Analysis
Who has a stake in what will be discussed or decided? How can their interests best be represented in the meeting?

Once you’ve identified the stakeholders, ask yourself what they would consider to be a good outcome. Then ask yourself if they need to be in the meeting or how they can best inform the conversation (e.g., via survey or focus group before the meeting).

Involvement in Decision Making
What level of involvement will participants have in the decision-making process?

First, be clear about who the final decision maker is for each topic the meeting will address. If the meeting participants are not the final decision makers, be clear with them about how the ideas generated in the meeting will inform the final decision. Make conscious choices about whether and how to gather input from absent stakeholders before the meeting begins and/or how to keep them informed after the meeting.

Meeting Roles
Who will play various meeting roles?

Examples include:
- Facilitator (focuses on process)
- Team leader (focuses on content/making sure the conversation gets to important outcomes)
- Content manager (takes notes, manages information between meetings)
- Hospitality and logistics
- Energy watcher (watches for and calls attention to important group dynamics, facilitates ice breakers and energizers)
SAMPLE AGENDA

Once you’ve answered the five questions for setting up your meeting, this template will help you to create a detailed facilitator’s agenda. You may decide to show less detail to meeting participants (e.g., delete the process column).

MEETING NAME

TIME

LOCATION OR WEB-LINK/CALL-IN INFO

Desired Outcomes

NOTE: Use these sample prompts to craft your desired outcomes. For each outcome that includes a decision either during the meeting or in the future, be sure to identify the decision maker(s).

By the end of the meeting, we will have:

- A shared understanding of _____, so that _____
  Decision making: [NAME] will make the final decision

- An initial set of ideas about (or list of) _____
  Decision making: [NAME] will make the final decision

- A prioritized list of _____
  Decision making: [NAME] will make the final decision

- Agreement on _____
  Decision making: Consensus with fall back to [NAME]

- Agreement on next steps

Detailed Agenda

NOTE: For each desired outcome, identify the topic(s) you’ll need to cover, the order in which you’ll cover them and process tools to move through each topic.

SUGGESTED MEETING NORMS
Norms are behaviors that can help to create brave space for learning and planning together. The following norms have been especially useful to us in discussions and workshops focused on equity, diversity and inclusion.

Listen deeply
Listen for understanding, not to prepare your rebuttal. Don't interrupt people as they speak. Try to acknowledge what you've just heard the previous person say before you go on to make another point. When you hear something that's different from your own thinking or analysis, accept the speaker's description of their experiences as real for them, even if you haven't experienced or don't understand it.

Make "I" statements
Speak from your own experience rather than speaking for others, about others, or generalizing your experience assuming it applies to others. Avoid statements like "everyone knows that...," "we all feel that...," or "we've all experienced..." Instead, try "here's how I see it...," "in my experience...," or "here's what I've observed..."

Take space/make space
If you tend to talk early and often, challenge yourself to make space for others. If you tend not to talk much, challenge yourself to jump in.

Keep it here
Exercise good judgment and respect if people share personal stories. Carry away what you learned without sharing who said what.

We don't have to agree
When you disagree, challenge the statement or the behavior instead of the person. Avoid using blame, shame and guilt on yourself or others. Try saying "...yes and..." rather than "...yes but..." to make space for different views to be heard.

Be willing to be uncomfortable
Don't mistake discomfort for a lack of safety. It's possible to be safe and uncomfortable at the same time. Lean into the discomfort to see what you can learn.

Expect and accept a lack of closure
You may leave with more questions than answers and that's okay. We won't dismantle racism in a single meeting. Understand that the conversation was part of an ongoing journey.

Use “ouch” and “oops”
We may say something without intending to harm or offend, but harm or offense might result anyway. If we notice ourselves saying something regrettable, we can say "oops" and try again. If we notice others saying it, we can say “ouch” and share what was off-putting in a sentence or two. Use these teachable moments to highlight the difference between intent and impact in a straightforward way—again, no shaming or blaming—to flag things that hurt or offend.

Recognize the difference between intent and impact
Despite our best intentions, we can cause harm to others. Be willing to acknowledge and repair the offense first. Don't start by insisting on recognition of your good intentions.

Recognize the partial nature of our truth
Humility and perspective are essential. Remember that what you think may not be true. Even if it is, it may not be complete. And it may not be true for everyone.

Enable empathy and compassion
Empathy is about understanding and sharing in the feelings of others. Compassion is concern for the suffering or challenges of others.

Be present
Eliminate distractions so you can be in the moment physically, mentally and emotionally.
